PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Birth, rebirth and rebuilding

It's been an honor to serve you

I began my presidency as a newlywed and closed it as the father of beautiful twin daughters, who arrived just in time for Father's Day. Looking back, I've had an exciting year, both personally and professionally.

Not every doctor has the privilege of leading the Chicago Medical Society nor experiencing the accomplishments and rewards of service in organized medicine. Since joining the Society in 1981, as a student, and through years in leadership roles, I've learned what a positive difference advocacy and connectedness can make in our lives and our patients.'

Events of the past 12 months, including a historic national election, the beginning of serious debate on health care reform, and a pending decision from the Illinois State Supreme Court, could soon impact medicine in a major way, not all favorably. Against this backdrop, we have continued to rebuild the Society.

Scott Warner, CMS

Dr. William McDade and wife, Jennifer, brought their two-week-old twin daughter, Julia Katherine, to the CMS Annual Dinner on June 7 (sister Madeline Jacqueline wasn't quite able to make it). Bidding farewell as president, Dr. McDade recounted his year's term and said he looks forward to CMS building even more bridges with the academic community.

First and foremost, we have a long-term plan to ensure financial stability through membership recruitment, rental income, and cost reductions. We have expanded our legislative meetings and watched as the mini-internship program blossomed. We will soon roll out an electronic newsletter for students and offer additional CME through our publications.

My stated goal last June was to reach out to my colleagues in the academic community. And the past 12 months mark the first time in many years that CMS has courted that group. Reaching out to our academic brethren has taken several directions. Allow me to recap:

- CMS crafted a resolution, "Funding of Health Services Education Grants Act (HSEGA)," that was adopted in April by the ISMS House. The resolution supports the immediate restoration of funding for the 2009 Illinois Board of Higher Education HSEGA. It additionally supports funding for this program on a continuing basis.

- I have personally met with the deans from each of the area medical schools to discuss a new form of collaboration, one in which medical schools partner in our clinical conference programs, providing content and speakers. We are proposing that our Conference planning committee consist of leaders from Chicago medical schools, and that meetings rotate among academic campuses in the area.

- In December, CMS and ISMS jointly hosted an educational forum led by the AMA's Paul Rockey, MD, Director of Graduate Medical Education. Dr. Rockey reviewed the AMA's influence on medical training and education. His tour-de-force presentation covered GME financing, regulation, and health manpower issues of the future. More than 60 attended, offering ideas for future events, including the Webinar.

- Your Society hosted a Webinar in February for medical residency program directors, in which Laurie Curtin, PhD, Director of the Match Policy, led participants through a series of scenarios.

- CMS gained 30 new academic members as a result of a membership recruitment letter under my signature.

When I assumed the presidency, I said that academicians and their private practice counterparts have more in common than they realize. And I've spent the past year targeting my colleagues at teaching institutions, offering reasons why they should join organized medicine.

My legacy to CMS, I hope, has been to lay the groundwork for a lasting relationship with the academic community. It has been an honor to serve you.

MEMBER BENEFITS

Keeping your practice healthy

YOUR SOCIETY HAS SELECTED NATIONAL City Bank as its preferred financial services sponsor. This will translate to more benefits for you, our CMS members. Why did CMS choose National City? For several reasons:

Not only is National City now part of PNC Financial Services Group, Inc., the fifth largest bank in the United States, and one of the most stable, but National City also has a medical executive team that is knowledgeable about the needs of health care professionals.

National City offers physicians personal banking, strategies for wealth accumulation, asset protection, and cash flow management, as well as business banking—a holistic approach to banking so to speak.

In addition to practice management seminars, National City also offers educational programs for medical students, residents, and retirees. One such program focuses on debt consolidation and personal banking for students. Free educational seminars are also offered to office staff.

You may question what's really in this for CMS. Financial commission is not part of it—CMS receives none! The Society's goal is the well-being and future stability of you, our members, and your respective practices. ## TRANSPLANTS AND POLICIES

Internships deepen legislators' understanding of medicine

CMS' MINI-INTERNSHIP PROGRAM, AN INITIATIVE matching physicians with lawmakers and civic leaders for a day, can boast two new graduates: State Rep. Cynthia Soto and Barry Maram, Director of Healthcare and Family Services of Illinois.

Shadowing CMS member Enrico Benedetti, MD, head of the Department of Surgery at the University of Illinois at Chicago, both interns were led through a live-donor kidney transplant, through rounds, and a tour of the Walter Payton Liver Center. While Dr. Benedetti performed a robotic kidney transplant using the da Vinci surgical system, Rep. Soto and Mr. Maram watched on a 3-D screen. After removing the donor kidney, Dr. Benedetti brought his guests into an operating room to watch as the donated kidney was prepared for a waiting recipient. Rep. Soto and Mr. Maram witnessed the entire process from donor to recipient.

Touring the Walter Payton Liver Center, the interns visited patients on the floor and interacted with staff, seeing first-hand a surgeon's additional responsibilities.

The day's activities jumpstarted conversation, raising issues that Mr. Maram and Rep. Soto decided to address immediately. Retiring to Dr. Benedetti's office, they held an impromptu conference call with Mr. Maram's Springfield office, while Dr. Benedetti expressed his opinions and concerns about transplants within Illinois. Needing more time, Mr. Maram set up an additional meeting for the following day.

The end result? Rep. Soto and Mr. Maram viewed a robotic kidney transplant and learned about issues facing transplant surgeons and hospitals. Dr. Benedetti was able to speak directly with people who shape policy and write legislation.

Sponsored by District 6, the internship took place on March 30 at UIC.

CMS Districts encouraged to host pols

Do you want to have an impact on your legislators in Springfield or Washington? Over the last several years, CMS has hosted successful legislative breakfasts, and the Society urges you to consider holding one at a District meeting. Previous meetings have been held at St. Alexius Medical Center, Rush North Shore Medical Center, and other fine hospitals. Legislative breakfasts are an excellent way to complement CMS' advocacy efforts. CMS staff can help you identify potential speakers and assist you in making invitations and arrangements.

CMS resolutions on table at annual meeting

CMS WAS WELL REPRESENTED AT THIS YEAR'S ISMS House, which met in Oak Brook from April 24-26 to deliberate more than 50 resolutions. Your Society contributed five resolutions to the policy-making table and individual CMS delegates brought an additional 10 (see following report). Prior to House deliberations, the CMS caucus met to reach a unified consensus on as many resolutions as possible. Afterwards, delegates fanned out to the four House Reference Committees to hear and give testimony.

The House meeting generated spirited discussion on balance billing, interpretive services, criteria for physician licensing, and a communications plan for health care reform, to name just a few.

James L. Milam, MD, an ob-gyn who practices in Vernon Hills, was sworn in as ISMS president for 2009-2010, and CMS Past President Peter E. Eupierre, MD, an internist practicing in Melrose Park, was re-elected as chair of the ISMS Board. Past President Steven M. Malkin, MD, was elected President-elect.

In addition to resolutions, a host of presentations rounded out the three-day meeting—from preventing medical misadventures to technology trends to retirement planning. Illinois Comptroller Dan Hynes was guest of honor at the ISMS Political Action Committee (IMPAC) $500 Club Breakfast. Delegates heard also from Sherman Joyce, President of the American Tort Reform Association and Sandra Gadson, MD, Chair of the AMA Commission to End Health Disparities.

Please note that next year's meeting takes place in Springfield and will coincide with Lincoln anniversary celebrations. It is imperative that all delegates be present to represent CMS concerns and interests.

The following resolutions were debated at the 2009 ISMS Annual House of Delegates:

CMS (THIRD DISTRICT) RESOLUTIONS Physician Profiling/Grading and Report Cards— Adopted

CMS and ISMS announce special rate for physicians out of residency

PHYSICIANS RECENTLY OUT OF RESIDENCY can join CMS/ISMS now and pay yearly dues as low as $176. This is an exceptional opportunity for physicians in their first, second, third, and fourth year out of residency to share in the benefits of organized medicine. With the usual yearly dues rate at $880, young physicians can save more money in CMS/ISMS benefits and services than the cost of dues. While benefiting from advocacy on their behalf, young physicians may take part in the CMS/ISMS policy-making process, serve on committees, and enjoy social/networking events. Following the old "strength in numbers" maxim, young physicians can increase the political strength of their profession through membership.

Students join healthy Chicago initiative

AS PART OF THE BUILDING A HEALTHIER Chicago coalition, CMS medical students are volunteering as wellness counselors in medical offices across the area.

First and second year medical students are trained in guideline-based therapeutic lifestyle interventions. They assist busy physicians by educating patients on the importance of physical activity, nutrition, and tobacco-free goals. Patients are selected at the physician's discretion and seen by the student after meeting with the physician. Patients are provided with a legal disclaimer explaining the encounter.

The students also help physicians and staff to learn and apply the Healthier Life

Steps™ Program toolkit developed by the American Medical Association (AMA). The free toolkit provides a guide for counseling patients, while reinforcing the importance of the physicians' own health. The toolkit benefits patients by providing tangible steps that lead to improved health, along with easy-to-use materials. The patient pages in the toolkit are available for free in English and Spanish.

Medical students underwent training for the program on April 25, 2009.

U.S. Assistant Surgeon General James M. Galloway, MD, is spearheading the coalition.

MENTORING STUDENTS

Specialty 'speed dating' event takes AMA headquarters by storm

MORE THAN 70 MEDICAL STUDENTS AND physicians recently visited AMA headquarters in Chicago for a special event aimed at helping students choose a specialty.

Attendees of the AMA's inaugural Specialty Speed Dating event, held March 31, drew medical students from Northwestern University's Feinberg School of Medicine, the University of Illinois at Chicago College of Medicine, Rush University Medical Center, Loyola University's Stritch School of Medicine, the University of Chicago's Pritzker School of Medicine, Chicago Medical School at Rosalind Franklin University of Medicine and Science, Midwestern University, and Michigan State University.

Medical students paired up with residents and physicians from various Chicago-area hospitals and residency programs for nine 15-minute speed dating rounds, covering featured specialties including dermatology, radiation oncology, internal medicine, pediatrics, obstetrics and gynecology, psychiatry, surgery, family medicine, anesthesiology, and emergency medicine. The advice and information the students took away helped make the event an undeniable success.

"I really wanted to get a chance to meet with area doctors in various specialties to get a good gauge of which direction I wanted to go as far as my specialty," said Neha Malhorta, a first-year medical student at the UIC College of Medicine. "It's important to figure this out before I get too far along, so it's helpful to talk many physicians in one night."

Christian Cain, also a first-year medical student at UIC, attended the event to help him choose a specialty that combines his love for research and academia.

"I'm filled with a plethora of possibilities," said Cain, a former researcher for the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. "I just want to get all the information I can so I can narrow my scope and make an informed decision."

Huddled around tables in the lobby of AMA headquarters, physicians talked with students about such issues as quality of life, salary, interests and future goals.

Attendees came away with practical insights, helpful advice and even invitations to stay in direct contact with physicians as a result of experiences at the event. "I really enjoyed this," said Mu

CMS Past President Joseph L. Murphy, MD, was among the physicians who visited AMA headquarters this spring to help medical students from seven area schools decide what specialties they would pursue.

Xu, a student from the University of Chicago's Pritzker School of Medicine. "Hopefully the AMA will host similar events in the future."

Among the CMS members on hand to mentor students were Russell Robertson, MD, Joseph L. Murphy, MD, and Dennis Galinsky, MD.

ments in the management of cardiac arrest. Dr. Murthy also spoke before Districts 2 and 3. Each lecture offered one hour of CME credit. TAKASHI YAGIHASHI was born in Mito, the capital of Ibaraki Prefecture, Japan, a small town about an hour northwest of Tokyo and just a few minutes from the sea, where he developed a taste for fresh seafood at a very young age. He started cooking at age sixteen and continued to work in restaurants while he earned his Interior Design degree from the Tokyo Design School. After a stint helping out with the opening of a Japanese restaurant in Chicago, the young chef embarked on a serious culinary education. He cooked for Yoshi Katsumura at the highly touted French-Japanese Yoshi's Café and Gabino Sotelino's Ambria where he worked his way up the line to chef de cuisine and eventually partner.

In 1996, Takashi opened Tribute to rave reviews. The Detroit Free Press gave the restaurant four stars; The New York Times called it "maybe the best restaurant between New York and Chicago and certainly the finest in Detroit." In 2003, he was named the 13th Annual James Beard Foundation Award for Best Chef: Midwest. In 2005, he opened Okada for Steve Wynn in the luxurious Wynn Las Vegas, where he created a contemporary Japanese menu influenced by his French training. He has since become a member of the Macy's culinary council and he opened Noodles by Takashi Yagihashi at Macy's in Chicago before opening his namesake restaurant in December 2007.
